

MORGAN HELME

B.A. English, emphasis in Journalism

Minors: Religious Studies, University Honors

Beckman 204

How to Save the News

With more newspapers folding every week and bloggers across the internet proclaiming the death of traditional news as we know it, is there a future for newspapers? Newspapers are at a crossroads, with two possible paths ahead: expiration or adaptation. Some believe newspapers have met their demise in the instant internet age and will soon be replaced. Others think newspapers are essential to our society and will find a means to continue fulfilling their essential role. The debate has yet to be decided – only the future will tell. This presentation will examine the possible alternatives for the future of the newspaper industry.