

CITIZENSHIP, COMMUNITY AND SERVICE

Students choose a course and/or complete three credits in one of the following categories that addresses that category's learning outcomes.

Citizenship Learning Outcome:

- Student demonstrates through analysis and/or personal engagement an understanding of the emergence, development, operations, and/or consequences of political systems in the US and other countries.
- Student can identify the rights and responsibilities of citizens and/or leaders as embodied in political, civic, or service organizations.

Community Learning Outcome

- Student demonstrates through analysis and/or personal engagement an understanding of the emergence, development, changes and challenges to and, in some cases, destruction of diverse social groups who are marginalized within the context of larger societal environments.
- Student demonstrates through written, oral, media or other communication process a critical perspective on issues of civil rights, self-representation, participatory politics, and/or similar issues of inclusiveness.

Service

- Student examines the theoretical and/or applied aspects of community service through coursework and/or through active engagement in a service -earning experience and demonstrates:
 - the ability to apply discipline-specific and/or interdisciplinary knowledge and critical thinking skills to community issues.
 - critical self-reflection of the student's own assumptions and values as applied to community issues.
 - knowledge and sensitivity to issues of culture, diversity, and social justice as applied to community engagement.

US Military Service for CC credit

Successful completion of 2 or more years of volunteer US military service completes the CC category. Contact the Registrar's Office for more information on what documentation is required or if non-US military service may be applicable to this category.

Service Learning Opportunities for CC credit

Student engages in a service-learning experience through an individual study or internship under the advisement of a faculty member that includes an academic component and is registered for academic credit. Instructions for application and criteria for approval are provided on the Request for Internship or Individual Study to be considered for General Education Citizenship, Community, Service category form, available on the Registrar's form page.
