

ARIEL LAWRENCE

*B.A. International
Business and Marketing*

Minor: University Honors

Mentor: Candace Ybarra, Ph.D.

Beckman 205

Globalization: The Good,
the Bad, and the Ugly

Globalization is the process by which regional economies, societies and cultures have become integrated through advancements in global networks by means of communication, transportation and trade. With the world becoming more globalized, many variations of change have developed: some noticeable and some not; some big and some small; some good and some bad. These changes have impacted countries economically, socio-culturally, technologically, politically, and biologically. I will continue to examine the inevitable revolutions that globalization has influenced in the world and focus on the general argument: is globalization good or bad?