

457(b) deferred compensation plan for Chapman University

The 457(b) plan offers an exclusive opportunity to increase your tax-deferred savings.

The 457(b) deferred compensation plan offers a select group of senior management and highly compensated employees an exclusive opportunity to double the tax-deferred contributions they set aside annually for their retirement.

To view investment options for the plan, go to TIAA.org/chapman.

In 2022, you can contribute up to $20,500 to your employer's 457(b) plan with TIAA, in addition to a maximum of $20,500 you may already be contributing to another employer-sponsored or supplemental plan such as a 403(b) or 401(k) plan.

How does the 457(b) plan work?

A 457(b) plan provides a select group of senior management and highly compensated employees the opportunity to contribute to an additional tax-deferred account offering a variety of investment options. Unlike with a 403(b) plan, however, the assets in a 457(b) plan are owned by your employer and are subject to creditor claims in the event of bankruptcy until distributed.

Your plan contributions are automatically made pretax through payroll deductions, reducing your current taxable income and taxes owed for the year.

Federal income taxes (and in most cases, state and local income taxes) on contributions and earnings are typically deferred in a 457(b) plan until paid or made available to you.

In order to avoid a default distribution from the plan and immediate taxation of benefits, you will be required to choose a distribution date and option within a specific period of time following your separation from service, as outlined in the plan document. Generally, to be entitled to receive a distribution from your 457(b) plan before age 70½ (if your plan allows), you must terminate employment. (Some plans also provide in-service distributions for events such as an unforeseeable emergency or small-sum distributions.)
