ECON-ENG-PHIL 357          Interterm 2019

Topics in Humanomics: Milton’s Paradise Lost and the Ethics and Economics of Wealth Creation

Catalog Description:
Prerequisites: Permission of instructors.

To be human is not to be an angel, but to know good and evil. To be human is to have the liberty to decide. To be human is to be limited, to face trade-offs. This course dialogically explores John Milton’s epic poem Paradise Lost, F.A. Hayek’s The Constitution of Liberty, and Thomas Sowell’s Knowledge and Decisions to shape one of the most fundamental questions of economics outside the Garden of Eden—not what must be decided but who shall decide. How do we apply the knowledge of good and evil in a society of strangers? What does the human constitution—“sufficient to [stand], though to free fall”—mean for responsibility and liberty in the creation of wealth? “The world [is] all before [us], where to choose.”

(Offered Interterm.) 3 credits. (7VI, 7SI, 7AI)

Program Learning Outcomes (Economics):

Knowledge of Economics: Each student will demonstrate knowledge of modern microeconomic theory and apply it to analyze economic policies and problems.

Communication: Each student will be able to communicate clearly, concisely and professionally in both written and oral forms.

Course Objectives:

Upon completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Articulate Milton’s concept of the knowledge of good and evil.
2. Explain Sowell’s argument that “the most fundamental question is not what decision to make but who is to make it.”
3. Integrate Milton’s and Hayek’s concepts of responsibility and liberty into an idea applicable to economics.
4. Complicate the popular tendency to moralize economic decisions and their results.
5. Challenge and deconstruct the perceived tension between economics and the humanities.
6. Ask cogent, thought-provoking questions based upon critical reading of texts across a range of genres—epic poem, non-fiction, and documentary.
7. Apply experience in economic experiments to ideas in literary and economic texts.

Required Texts:

Essential Facility:
Seminar setting

Instructional Methods:
This course uses a combination of hands-on learning in Socratic roundtable discussions of texts, writing workshops, question development, experiments, and demonstration of meaning making through expository and creative papers.

Evaluation:
1. Participation in Class Discussions [15%]
   Class discussion provides an opportunity for students to explore questions about exchange and the human condition, challenging the common perception of economics as distinct from the humanities. Through this shared inquiry, students gain experience reading for meaning and communicating complex ideas; thinking reflectively about an interpretive problem; and supporting and testing thoughts through dialogue with peers. Class discussion fosters the flexibility of mind to consider problems from multiple perspectives and the ability to analyze ideas critically. Students must enter the discussion with specific questions generated by all of our texts as well as a desire to probe and reevaluate ideas. It is essential that students bring texts and questions to each class session.

2. Laboratory Experiments [5%]
   Part of the experiential learning in this class involves participating in laboratory exercises involving concepts that we will discuss in a future class. All you need to do is show up on time and make the decisions you deem to be the best for the situation presented to you.

3. Written Questions [15%]
   Shared inquiry is a process for exploring the central ideas of the course. This means students must read for meaning, identifying possible interpretative problems they would like to address in discussion. For each class period with an assignment, students will word process in advance two questions to be handed in before class starts. Asking a good question is harder than providing a good answer. The student’s task is to delve into a claim that doesn’t appear correct or consistent with the human condition. Explore with your question why the claim is surprising, unexpected, just plain unsettling. Why is there a clash? Such questions will prepare the student for their daily writing.

4. Writer’s Workshop [10%]
   Each day for the second hour of the course students will write 250 polished words. More details will be discussed in class.

5. Expository and Creative Writing [40%]
   For the first two weeks, a daily essay will either (1) analyze the social structures of responsibility and liberty in Paradise Lost, Hayek, and Sowell; (2) analyze critically the epic poem Paradise Lost; or (3) articulate how values and ethics inform our understanding of responsibility and liberty. For the third week the three daily writings will culminate in a critical work that conceptually analyzes Paradise Lost. For the fourth week, the four daily writings will culminate in an expository essay on the values and ethics of wealth creation using ideas from both Milton and Hayek.

6. Oral Final Examination [15%]
   The oral final examination will involve dice. Other details will be discussed in the final week of the course.

Because of the interactive nature of the class, attendance is an essential component. Excessive tardies constitute absences; three absences may result in failure (Undergraduate Catalog, “Academic Policies and Procedures”). Please keep this in mind. Missed in-class work cannot be made up.

Students with Disabilities
In compliance with ADA guidelines, students who have any condition, either permanent or temporary, that might affect their ability to perform in this class are encouraged to contact the Office of Disability Services. If you will need to utilize your approved accommodations in this class, please follow the proper notification procedure for informing your professor(s). This notification process must occur more than a week before any accommodation can be utilized.
