Italian Studies Council Project Award
Up to $1500 awards for Chapman Students

The Italian Studies Council wishes to support projects that foster students’ education and professional pursuits as well as the reputation of the Italian Studies program. Some examples of projects that can represent Chapman University Italian Studies program are: conference presentations, film productions, publications, the organization of community-service projects, organization of university-community events, and establishment of business collaborations.

Awards Requirements
Declared Italian Studies Minor
Complete project before graduation
The project cannot be connected to course assignment or grade
The project must represent Chapman University Italian Studies program

Application and Selection Process
Submits a 500-750 words proposal to Dr. Federico Pacchioni at pacchion@chapman.edu, along with the form below. The proposal should also include a breakdown of the budget and a description of how the outcomes will be shared with the Council. The Council will discuss the viability of the project and make a decision regarding the award (1-2 months). Successful applicants will receive a letter stating the Council’s commitment to provide support, and including the amount of funds allocated for the project. Funds will be provided in the form of reimbursement, upon submission of documentation (invoices, receipts, etc.). Advances are also a possibility depending on the nature of the project. Upon completion of the project, the student must be available to present the results to the Council Board.

Name: ____________________________________________________________

Address: __________________________________________________________

E-mail: ___________________________ Phone#: _________________________

Major: ___________________________ Minor/Cluster: __________________

Please list any Italian Studies courses you have completed or plan to enroll in:

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

ABOUT THE ITALIAN STUDIES COUNCIL

The Italian Studies Council is a non-profit initiative whose goal is to benefit the teaching and learning of Italian Studies at Chapman as well as to develop the role that the program plays within the city of Orange and greater Orange County. The members of the Council collaborate in constructive endeavors along with the Italian Studies faculty and students to promote academic achievement, student and faculty projects, cultural and artistic programming, and community-service initiatives. The Council is interested in projects of mutual enrichment originating from individuals or groups outside academia.