

CHAPMAN UNIVERSITY
DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY

“The sociological imagination enables us to grasp history and biography and the relations between the two within society. That is its task and its promise.

-C. Wright Mills

Sociology majors explore foundational ideas about the nature of society, are introduced to key subfields of the discipline, and acquire research and analysis skills to carry out their own inquiries. The department's faculty members work in a number of subfields including applied and community sociology, the family, health and medicine, law and society, international and global sociology, gender, the sociology of religion, qualitative and quantitative research methods and cultural anthropology.

What makes Chapman's Sociology Department unique? Faculty members who specialize in American Indian culture, social work, women's studies, folklore, public sociology, geographic information systems, criminology, and areas crucial to understanding all aspects of society; hosting conferences on immigration, globalization, and cultural awareness; providing travel courses that focus on social change, Tibetan teachings, and visual culture. These are examples of how our majors are not just studying sociology – they are living it.

The Department is dedicated to using sociological knowledge to address societal inequalities, reduce human suffering, and enhance social justice. We strive to preserve the human rights of all people, while respecting human diversity and the plurality of cultures and societies.

Curriculum

The Sociology curriculum combines the substantive study of the nature of society with training in research skills which can be applied across a range of careers. All Sociology majors take the following classes, in addition to Intro to Sociology (SOC 101) and 27 units worth of Sociology and Anthropology electives. At the sophomore level, students take Introduction to Research Methods which focuses on how to conduct empirical research and covers topics that include research design, analysis, and reporting. Advanced students, students take Field Research which introduces field research and data collection through participant observation and interviewing. In Survey Research, students are provided with the skills necessary to accomplish quantitative research methods and learn quantitative data collection, analysis and reporting and the use of analytical software. As seniors, students apply the skills and ideas to a thesis project in which they develop, carry out, and present their own original research.

Alpha Kappa Delta

Alpha Kappa Delta is the international honor society for sociology students and is dedicated to the ideal of Athropon Katamanthanein Diakonesein, “to investigate humanity for the purpose of service.” Alpha Kappa Delta seeks to acknowledge and promote excellence in scholarship in the study of sociology, the research of social problems, and the improvement of the human condition.

Interdisciplinary

Minor in Anthropology

The minor in Anthropology at Chapman University focuses on Cultural Anthropology; the study of shared meanings gives us tools for relating across cultures and understanding our rich heritages and traditions.

Minor in Women's Studies

The Women's and Gender Studies minor explores interdisciplinary approaches to the study of women and gender inequality; cultural representations and their social roles; and the social axes of gender, race, class, and sexuality. The minor provides students with a broad, interdisciplinary framework for analyzing social practices related to gender as well as impacts on their own lives.

Minor in Law, Justice, and Social Control

This minor provides students with an opportunity to examine key areas of law and social control as well as explore selected aspects of social justice. After completing three required courses, students are allowed to select from a wide variety of courses that span the disciplines of sociology, political science, psychology, philosophy and forensics.

Minor in Latinx and Latin American Studies

The Minor in Latinx and Latin American Studies integrates theories of decolonization and liberation with the exploration of historic geopolitical, economic, and sociocultural conditions of Latin American development and how they have shaped contemporary U.S. Latinx identities.
